Abu Dhabi set to revise health insurance scheme

Abu Dhabi: The full medical insurance scheme for Emiratis working in the private sector will be withdrawn by the Health Authority Abu Dhabi (HAAD) effective from February.

A circular issued by the HAAD on February 5th states that Emiratis working in the private sector will henceforth have to bear 50 per cent of the cost of pharmaceutical products and dental care services. The new rule cuts back on some of the benefits enjoyed by Emiratis under the “Thiqah” Health Insurance scheme. The Thiqah card earlier assured nationals of access to free medical coverage in all health care facilities and guaranteed them the broadest geographical coverage and extra health benefits.

Dr. Bitzer acknowledged that people alarmed by the decision had been keeping the call centre busy with their phone calls. When contacted for clarification, the official at the HAAD concerned with health insurance policies refused to comment on the decision. However, in earlier meetings, some of the HAAD’s top officials had sought to tell the media that all Thiqah card holders would be entitled to full medical treatment free of charge.
